The sixth day of 'Jairangam' was as exciting as the first five days, filled with thrill, excitement, joy and mixed emotions, as the intensity of acts and plays has been increasing with every passing day. The first play of the day at Jawahar Kala Kendra (JKK), 'Dulari Bai' by Sudhesh Vyas was a folk story consisting of folk colours and environment, in which various festive songs were utilised. The second play at JKK, 'Andha Yug' by Dharamvir Bharti was set in the background of the last day of Mahabharata war.

The third and the last play 'Ovee a Haunted Hostel' was enacted at Birla Auditorium, which was a horror play that brings a new dimension to the theatre industry. There are three more plays being enacted today- 'Bhanwrya Kaalet' and 'Rengti Parchaiyan' at Jawahar Kala Kendra, and 'Gagan Damama Bajyo' at Birla Auditorium, respectively.

Live sculptor-making of Indian actor Rakesh Bedi was made by Hansraj Chitrabhooni during the film festival

The word 'Swarag' refers to an emotional state of a person united with music. The name itself is a combination of two different words- 'Swa' and 'Raga' and such is an enchantment of the music create by the band that the listeners and music are no longer separate entities. The band 'Swarag' has truly captivated the souls of their listeners each and every time they have taken up the stage. With the perfect mix of western and traditional Indian music, it has always successfully created a separate world for the followers.

"The band was founded in 2014 and according to the listeners, the artists evolved with time. Folk, Sufi and instrumental music are the genre of Swarag. The artists in the band express the deep-rooted thoughts of one's heart with their music. When combined with their instrumental genius, their music talks to the very spirit of its listeners," shared Pratap Singh, founder of Swarag, in an interview to City First.

The band performs across the country with eight artists- Arif Khan, Sitar player as well as the co-founder of the band; Asif Khan, lead singer; Sajid Khan, drummer; Tasruf Ali, saxophone player; Arif Khan, Rajasthan instruments, mainly Khartal/Morchang; Mohd. Seif Ali Khan, Tabla player and Rey Rozerr; acoustic guitar player.

Currently, Swarag is working on their upcoming album and originals. The band has also won 'WOW Awards 2019' in the category of best performances in social and corporate events.
